CHECK IN

Striving and Surviving in Australia with the GAA

Travelling abroad for any extended period of time, whether by choice or through necessity, brings with it great opportunities but also many challenges.

From obtaining visas, accommodation and employment to maintaining your health and wellbeing and your connections to home, there's a lot to keep you up at night. Finding a little piece of home from home always helps, and your local GAA club, whether in Perth, Bahrain, Seoul, Ottawa, San Francisco, Munich, London, or South Africa, can support you on your journey.

This wallet card aims to highlight some key issues you should be aware of if travelling through or moving to Australia. It includes top tips from Irish people who have already gone through the experience as well as links to social media sites and other services designed to support the Irish Down Under.

A more in-depth resource for the Irish abroad including tips on how our international GAA units contribute to the health and wellbeing of their members, is available at www.gaa.ie/community

We also asked Australian GAA Members what other big issues they had faced. Here's what they had to say on some of the recurring themes.

- Loneliness and being isolated from natural support network of home
- “Pressure of being on a 457 visa. Issues with employer leads to heightened stress. Really makes being abroad even more stressful.”
- The transition to a second year visa proved problematic for many
- Almost 1 in 3 GAA members in Australia have accessed a support service while abroad. Most common were health, Irish Embassy, and emergency services.
- The challenge of getting home for a family emergency or special event arose frequently
- “My partner works FIFO (Fly in, Fly out) in mines 4:1 (4 weeks on, one week off). Brings loneliness, slightly depressed, isolated.”
- Many people mentioned the cultural differences; missing the crack and life back home
- Sickness or dealing with serious injury; the cost of medical services featured heavily
- Obtaining accommodation and work is a challenge; the cost of transferring qualifications and need for references was highlighted

Section 2 – The Throw-in: Arriving in Australia

Here are some of the big issues you need to be aware off about life in Oz (compiled from feedback from GAA members and www.irisharoundoz.com – a great hub and forum for all kinds of useful information).

- Accommodation – cost and lack of supply shock many new arrivals in Australia; plan well in advance and have your references and identification requirements in order.
- Employment – depending on your visa you will have to fulfil various requirements before you can even start work.
- Tax & Superannuation – these are not one and the same. Tax rates vary depending on your employment status (casual, full-time, resident for tax purposes etc). See www.ato.gov.au/ Superannuation (Super) is money that your employer sets aside for you every time they pay you and it's usually about 9%. See taxback.com
- Networking – before you depart sign up to all the social media pages dedicated to helping the Irish in Australia, they are a treasure trove of useful, immediate information. See our list.
- Identification – it doesn't matter how old you look you will need ID (Irish passport or a proof of age card Australia) to get into a bar or club.

- Primary health care – Ireland has a reciprocal health care agreement with Australia covering some essential medical treatments. This is not designed to replace private or travel health insurance (essential) and does not cover the cost of ambulances (which are VERY expensive).
- Health & Wellbeing – finding your feet in a new country can be stressful and can impact negatively on your health and wellbeing. Don't be afraid to reach out for help if you need it. Australia is a world leader in mental health care.
- Undocumented (unlawful) people – over 1,000 Irish are estimated to be residing unlawfully in Australia. Not getting sponsored or getting visa renewed are the most common reasons. The ramifications can be significant; check in with your Embassy to explore your options and stay legal.
- Money transfers – dedicated services such as currencyfair.com or ozforex.com offer more competitive rates and less charges than many financial entities, explore your options.
- Community, cultural & sporting links – as we do all over the world, we Irish tend to make ourselves at home. Link in with the countless communities and clubs designed to create a little piece of home away from home.

Section 3 - The final whistle – Coming home

According to the Central Bank's statistics the number of Irish emigrants returning home has been remarkably consistent since 2008. For every 2 people leaving Australia 1 person is returning back to the Emerald Isle. Even though there is an inherent desire in Irish people to travel and see the world this is coupled with a desire to come home. Often emigrants spend many agonising, sleepless nights weighing up options which often boil down to good jobs abroad versus family, friends and a strong community. One of the GAA's strengths is it can enhance this sense of community both home and abroad.

Whether you have been living abroad for a few years or you have been away for a short time here are some points to consider before you return home.

- ✓ Accommodation – what type will I need?
- ✓ Finding a job – Where to look to find a job?
- ✓ Benefits and entitlements – What are my entitlements?
- ✓ Banking – What documentation do I need?
- ✓ Pensions – Is my pension transferable to Ireland?
- ✓ Health Care – Entitled to a medical card?
- ✓ Health Insurance?
- ✓ GAA Club – Do I need to organise a transfer or sanction?

If you are thinking about returning home and wish to speak to someone or gather more information please contact a social support agency such as Crosscare Migrant Project.
